

	Neutral Situation (Yes)	Uncertain Situation (Maybe so?)	Dangerous Situation (No)
Consent or lack of consent	Probable to positive consent	Possible positive consent Possible sexual assault	Sexual assault
General examples	No pressure from one party to another Alcohol and/or substance is having little to no effect Non-verbal signs of consent/little to no verbal consent	Few clear signs of consent Unclear if individuals are feeling pressured Passivity from one party Alcohol and/or substance usage and effect is unclear Someone is acting out of character	One party is pressuring another Individual resists Clear that someone is intoxicated and cannot effectively evaluate the situation Forceful and/or threatening behavior used Fooling around/having sex with someone who is incapacitated or unconscious
When you are in the situation	Ask yourself questions What do you want?	Stop and think Is this something you want? Take a bathroom break Put the situation on hold and find a friend.	Stop the behavior and remove yourself from the situation. Call for others to help Call Public safety or 911 Seek medical attention and/or counseling if necessary
When you are the friend or bystander	As a friend you should be watching out for your other friends. Make sure you're all asking each other questions throughout the night and hold each other accountable. If you're uneasy about a situation then say something to your friend. Make sure it's not a situation that could end in sexual assault. Alcohol and substances are NEVER an excuse for sexual assault.  If you see something, say something.		As a friend or a random bystander you have the responsibility to stop the situation. Grab a friend and intervene. Distract, divert, disrupt, do something that changes the situation.

Yes. No. Maybe So?

This is a tool that you can use when at a party, in a club or a dorm. This was created to help you evaluate a situation that could end in sexual assault.

When you enter into a party, a club or a dorm, you assume the responsibility to look after one another, especially those who can't look out for themselves. You might be afraid to do something because of the negative consequences you may face, a friend being upset with you or even everyone at the party being upset. The consequences of not doing anything at all far outweigh the consequences of intervening. Sexual assault is not to be taken lightly; it is a serious offense that alters a person's life for the worst.
